New York Minister Says Too Many Americans Make Wealth Their God.

CARNEGIE ON PHILANTHROPY.

Is Most Pleased When by His Giving He Has Induced Others to Give-Good and Bad Charity.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

New York, Nov. 29,-Andrew Carnegie made a speech to-day before the patrons end trustees of the Montefiore Home, a Hebrew institution of this city, on the uses and abuses of wealth. Discussing the giving of money, he said: "A philanthropist is generally a man who has more money than good sense. Money is frequently given by men without thought, simply to ease their conscience. Money given in that way, nine times out of ten, does no good. There is no use of helping anybody up a ladder unless he does some of the climbing himself. As long as 'hoost' the man will stay up, but as soon as you let go he falls, and the last state of that man is worse than the first "I congratulate you in that I see wisdom in all that you do in this institution. You do not depend upon a few large sums. In the number of those who contribute is the, best guarantee of usefulness. Some men wish to build monuments to their memo ries. It seems to me that very poor taste is displayed in erecting mausoleums which cost thousands, when for $1,000 one may have a monument in perpetuity in this in-stitution.

Induces Others to Give. "When I heard about it I felt like writing to the treasurer and asking him if the list were filled. Your race and mine are reputed to know a good bargain when they see it. I think that would be a good bargain, even for a Scotchman.
"A man came to me recently and con-gain, even for a Scotchman.

"A man came to me recently and congratulated me upon having given millions to a technical institution in Pittsburg. I said, No. But if you congratulate me upon having induced Pittsburg to give a large sum for a public library, shake."

"I wish to have on my tombstone not what I have given, but the names of those whom I have induced to give."

the story of the troubles of this house begins about the first of last July, when it was located at No. 538 North King's highway. One morning is caught fire in the roof, and was partly destroyed. Mrs. Kretschmar owns a vacant lot on McMillan avenue, west of the Reformed Presbyterian Church, and she contracted with a firm to move the house to that lot. Much stress is laid upon the continued improvement of the forecast service, and the value of its warnings. The Secretary points out that, notwithstanding the great member of craft plying the Gulf of Mexico at the time of the Galveston storm, the warnings were so timely that there was no disaster upon the open waters.

Successful experiments have been made with wireless telegraphy. National legislation on the subject of food adulterations is urged as essential to sup-plement the work done by the several States. Progress is noted in Alaska. It is admitted that Alaska can never become an agri cultural country, but the problem the de partment has undertaken to work out is to determine whether a sufficient agricul-ture may be developed in Alaska to form an important subsidiary industry to aid in the development of mining, fisheries and lumbering. The secretary believes expeti-ment stations should be established in

Secretary Wilson cites the introduction of wheats from Russia, Hungary and Austria, greatly exceeding in yield our present varieties, and points out that if, as the result of these introductions, the wheat yield of the United States should be increased by but one bushel per acre, this would mean at the farm price for wheat in 1839 an addition of $25,000,000 to the income of our farmers.

As a result of experiments conducted in Texas under the supervision of the Division of Agrostology, the grazing of pastures has been so much improved that where, three years ago, they were estimated as capable of supporting one steer to sixteen acres, they will now maintain in good condition one steer to eight acres, a gain of 100 per cent.

Under the head of the section of foreign markets, the report says that the study of markets abroad, with special reference to extending the demands therein for the agricultural products of the United States, has been prosecuted with zeal and intelligence. The rapid growth of our export trade to the Orient in recent years is most striking. STRONGEST MAN IN THE TRI-CITIES DIES SUDDENLY FROM OVEREXERTION

American Steel Foundry plant.

His hardened muscles made it possible for him to do the heaviest work of any of the men in the shop. "As strong as Big Joe" was the catch phrase of the foundry applied to any laborer who distinguished himself by any feat of strength, but when it came to a test with the heavyweight himself the new aspirant invariably acknowledged McMurry the best man.

The blacksmith donned his street clothes and quitted the works by way of the time gate, as was his custom. On the way to his boarding-house he passed Fritz Houser, a Bottoms farmer, en route to St. Louis with a wagon load of turkeys. The rear wheel of the vehicle was sprung from disuse, and at Houser's request McMurry supported the back end of the wagon and eased it to the ground, while the farmer removed the wheel to fix it. Houser said he would have to deliver the turkeys in St. Louis before daylight or he would be unable to dispose of them. Mc-Murry helped him repair the wheel and then lifted the axle to premit Houser to

This last exertion brought on a hemorrhage, and by the time McMurry reached his room he was weak from loss of blood.

"In the preparation of the present bill the minimum number of men is fixed for each organization, with a proviso that the President may, in his discretion, increase the number of enlisted men in any troop, battery or company, provided that the total number of enlisted men authorized for the army by Congress shall not at any time be
